Use this worksheet as you consider how to identify and engage partners necessary for PSE change.

Why are partners integral to PSE change? Consider the following:

- Why should others care about PSE change?
- How does PSE change impact others in the community? - Identify your stakeholders
- What can be accomplished as a group that cannot be accomplished by individual people or organizations?

How will you identify and evaluate your potential partners? Consider the following:

- Which stakeholders (decision makers, patients, caregivers, employers, providers, researchers, etc.) should be included in the PSE change process? Why?
- Are there any other partners who should be brought into the conversation? – Consider non-traditional partners like businesses, industry or non-health care organizations
- Why does (or should) each stakeholder care about the issue(s)?
- Will any stakeholders be opposed to the change? Why?
- Do the stakeholders’ missions align to accomplish the shared goal(s)? How?
  - If not, what common ground do you all have?
- What resources (tangible and intangible) do you need that stakeholders can provide?

How can you hold stakeholders accountable? Consider the following:

- Have you identified a leader (either an individual or a committee/group) to hold the team accountable and drive the process forward?
- Which model of leadership will work best for the PSE change initiative?

Notes:

________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________
________________________________________________________________________